

¶ By the King.

His later age and times of the world wherein we are fallen, is so much giuen to verball profission, aswell of Religion, as of all commendable Morall vertues, but wanting the actions and deedes agreeable to so specious a profession, as it hath bred such an unsatiable curiositie in many mens spirits, and such an itching in the tongues and pennes of most men, as nothing is left unsearched to the bottome, both in talking and writing. For from the very highest mysteries in the Godhead, and the most inscrutable Councils in the Trinitie, to the very lowest pit of Hell, and the confused actions of the diuels there, there is nothing now unsearched into by the curiositie of mens braines; Men not being contented with the knowledge of so much of the will of God, as it hath pleased him to reueale; but they will needs sit with him in his most priuie Closet, and become partie of his most inscrutable Councils: And therefore it is no wonder, that men in these our dayes doe not spare to wade in all the deepest mysteries that belong to the persons or State of Kings or Princes, that are gods vpon Earth: since we see, (as we haue already said) that they spare not God himselfe. And this licence that every talker or writer now assumeth to himselfe, is come to this abuse, that many Phormio's will giue counsell to Hanibal, and many men that never went out of the compasse of Cloisters or Colledges, will freely wade by their writings in the deepest mysteries of Monarchie and politique gouernment: Whereupon it cannot otherwise fall out, but that when men goe out of their element, and meddle with things aboue their capacitie: themselves shall not onely goe astray, and stumble in darknesse, but will mislead also diuers others with themselues into many mistakings and errors: The prooofe wherewch wee haue lately had by a Booke written by Doctour Cowell, called THE INTERPRETER: For hee being onely a Ciuilian by profession, and vpon that large ground of a kinde of Dictionary (as it were) folowing the Alphabet, hauing all kind of purposes belonging to Gouernment and Monarchie in his way, by meddling in matters aboue his reach, he hath fallen in many things to mistake and deceiue himselfe: In some things disputing so nicely vpon the Mysterieis of this our Monarchie, that it may receive doubtfull interpretations: yea in some pointes very derogatory to the supreme power of this Crowne: In other cases mistaking the true state of the Parliament of this Kingdome, and the fundementall Constitutions and priuiledges thereof: And in some other points speaking vnreuerently of the Common Law of England, and of the works of some of the most famous and ancient Judges therein: it being a thing vtterly vnlawfull to any Subiect, to speake or write against that lawe vnder which he liueth, and which we are sworne and are resolued to maintaine. Wherefore, vpon iust considerations moving vs hereunto, for preventing of the saydererrors and inconueniences in all times to come, we doe hereby not onely prohibite the buying, uttering or reading of the sayd Books, but doe also will and straitly commaund all and singular persons whatsoeuer, who haue or shall haue any of them in their hands or custody, That vpon paine of our high displeasure, and the consequence thereof, they doe deliuere the same presently vpon this publication, to the Lord Maior of London, if they or any of them be dwelling in or neare the sayd Citie, or otherwise to the Sheriff of the County where they or any of them shall reside, and in the two Uniuerstyis to the Chancellor or Vicechancellor there, to the intent that further order may be giuen for the vtter supressing thereof. And because there shall be better oversight of Books of all sortes before they come to the Presse, we haue resolued to make choice of Commissioners that shall looke more narrowly into the nature of all those things that shall be put to the Presse, either concerning our Authoritie Royall, or concerning our gouernment or the Lawes of our Kingdome, from whom a more strict account shalbe yeelded vnto vs, then hath bene vsed heretofore.

Given at our Palace of Westminster, the 25. day of March, in the eight yeere of our Reigne of Great Britaine, France and Ireland.

God save the King.
